"Les Heures Claires": a functional villa flooded with fresh air and natural light

This one-of-a-kind tour focusses on the functionality and "hygienism" aspects of the villa. Since the 19th century, numerous scientific and medical discoveries have solidly established the link between living conditions and people's health. Architects began thinking about how they could help improve health through the design of homes. With the Villa Savoye, Le Corbusier built a modern and functional home flooded with fresh air and natural light. This holiday home overlooking the River Seine was a weekend residence fully dedicated to health, wellness, sport, and leisure.

- Languages offered: French and English
- Duration: 1hr30.
- Prices: flat fee of €250 + €7.50 per person.
